PROHIBITION IN VIRGINIA

State-wide prohibition entered the arena as a full-fledged issue in Virginia when the Anti-Saloon League, assembled in annual convention in January 1916, at the Broad Street Methodist Church, this city, formally dissolved its attachment to local option as a method of dealing with the liquor problem. At this convention it adopted resolutions committing the Anti-Saloon League of Virginia to State-wide prohibition.

The movement found miblic expression in the legislative session of 1000

The movement found public expression in the legislative session of 1910 when Senator Aubrey E. Strode, of Amherst, introduced an enabling act identical in its main provisions with the act which was yesterday ratified by the people of Virginia. The Strode bill was overwhelmingly defeated and never emerged from the Senate.

A second attempt to secure the passage of an enambling act was made in the General Assembly of 1912. Delegate James R. Jordan, of Isle of Wight County, introduced in the House of Delegates the famous "Jordan bill," which became the subject of bitter debate and contention. The bill was passed by the House by a substantial majority, but was defeated in the Senate.

The third and last enabling act was introduced during the last session of the Legislature by Delegate Martin Williams, of Giles County. It was passed by the House within a few days after it was introduced and concurred in by the Senate by the narrow vote of 20 to 19. This was the act which was yesterday ratified by the people.

The prohibitive provisions of the enabling act go into effect on November

On and after November 1, 1916, it will be unlawful for any person, social club, firm or corporation, to manufacture for sale, sell, or purchase for sale, transport for sale, dispense or otherwise dispose of any spirituous, vinous, fermented, distilled or malt liquors, or intoxicating bitters within this State, except for medicinal, scientific, sacramental or mechanical purposes as may be allowed under the provisions of such acts as the General Assembly may pass at its next regular session.

Southwest Virginia Rolls Up Bigger Majority for State-Wide Than

Was Expected.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

BRISTOL, VA., September 22.—Both the advocates of State-wide prohibition and those opposed to prohibition were surprised as the returns came in from county after county in Southwest Virginia showing that this section of the State had voted far beyond expectations in favor of prohibition. Full and almost complete returns from counties of this section of the State show that with the exception of Dickenson and Buchanan Counties, which gave majorities against prohibition of from 300 to 400, the counties recorded majorities against prohibition of from 200 to 1,700 each. While the temperance people expected majorities in most of the Southwest Virginia counties, they were not looking for anything like the vote that was cast for that side of the issue.
In Bristol, for example, the most sanguine advocates of State-wide did not hope for more than to break even, while the more conservative believed that the town would vote wet by probably fifty majority.

The cicction was orderly in all the countles, despite the intense interest in some localities. No serious trouble was expected from any of the counties in this section. State-wide prohibition advocates here accept the verdict with a feeling that the prohibition was to gaining in velocity and cannot be long stayed in any quarter of the country.

He predicted that the Gen-eral Assembly of 1916 will pass laws which will totally wipe out the liquor traffic from the State. "We have heard from practically every county in the State, with the exception of Franklin," he said, "and I believe that the majority in favor of State-wide prohibition will be from 30,000 to 50,000."

Concluding his speech, Dr. Cannon said he believed that the majority favoring State-wide prohibition in Virginia would equal, if not exceed the 45.000 majority by which the "drys" won in the prohibition election in North Carolina. When he had finished other workers in the cause of prohibition were called and made brief speeches.

Says It Was What He Expected of Virginia Voters.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

NORFOLK, VA., September 22.—J. W. Hough, president of the Virginia Anti-Saloon League, gave out the following statement to-might:

"While it was a glorious victory, it is about what we expected of Virginia voters. The result is sufficient evidence that the effort to confuse the issue in various ways failed in its purpose.

"The partnership of Virginia voters with the liquor traffic is forever dissolved. The next step will be not the "tobacco issue." but a concerted effort to elect officials everywhere who are favorable to law enforcement, and who can be depended upon to make prohibition legislation thoroughly effective.

"In the meantime, the liquor self-ers and their employes have ample time to get into more useful lines of employment, and I can say positively that no men or organization will more cheerfully and earnestly assist these men to do so than the State and city Anti-Saloon Leagues.

"Throughout the entire campaign the records will show that our fight has been on the liquor traffic, not on the men concerned with it.

"The result in Norfolk is exceedingly gratifying, especially as Norfolk has been considered one of the 'wet spots in Virginia." The large vote for prohibition guarantees an ample public sentiment to secure most rigid law enforcement."
